

Where's the inspiration?

Written by Gayle Nobel

Wednesday, 09 February 2011 16:57 - Last Updated Wednesday, 09 February 2011 17:35

Blog-a-thon Day 24

I'll just come out and say it. I'm just not feelin it today. Not feeling what? Inspirational OR inspired. It's been a weird, out of sync day for me. Kyle ended up home with me for half the day because of a schedule change.

We had lunch. My sister-in-law delivered a fun, random type birthday gift bag of goodies. We took a walk in the warm winter Arizona sunshine and sat on a rock for a long time. It felt like we "should" be doing more until I told the "should" voice I was putting it on mute for now. I would have given anything for a peaceful day like this when Kyle was in crisis last fall. And here, my "should" voice was trying to ruin the moment. Perhaps you can relate.

Then I showed up at the computer, all ready to blog and instead found myself answering emails and on facebook. Darn Facebook. While I was there, I looked around for something inspiring, but didn't find anything.

Back to my email. I replied to MP and saved our friendship. MP did something courageous. She was offended by something I did, actually something I did not do, was hanging on to it- since probably about October, and decided in the interest of our friendship, to tell me. I was able to clarify (she was missing information about the situation), and voila, we made the repair and can continue to be friends without those yucky, awkward feelings that come from festering misunderstandings like this. Thanks MP- you did good.

So this all leads me right to....? Here. As I said, not feelin it. Rereading my meandering above and thinking you will have to use it as ingredients to make your own inspiration today.

I'm drawing a blank on how to close, so going to end with a picture that makes me smile!

Where's the inspiration?

Written by Gayle Nobel

Wednesday, 09 February 2011 16:57 - Last Updated Wednesday, 09 February 2011 17:35

PS I think this is one of the best photographs we have of Kyle in recent years. If you know Kyle, don't you agree? You'll have to go right to the blog to see it... AutismWithAttitude.comBlog